RIGHT TO EDUCATION COUNTRY FACTSHEET
LIBERIA

This brief intends to assist practitioners to identify the key national policies relevant to the right to education, analyse their strengths and weaknesses and detect the gaps between policies and practice, in order to use the empirical data collected to define an advocacy strategy informed by human rights. The information collected here reflects what is publicly available; it is neither intended to be exhaustive nor to give an authoritative analysis of the situation in the country, but rather, to be a useful tool for the reflection on the right to education.

THE RIGHT TO EDUCATION IN LIBERIA: A BRIEF ANALYSIS

1. Education policy framework in Liberia
Liberia’s constitution guarantees equal access to educational opportunities and facilities for all citizens, and Liberia has ratified the key regional and international conventions protecting the right to education. However, Liberia has not signed any of the instruments allowing individual complaints for human rights abuses at the international level, and its domestic law, in particular the constitution, does not directly incorporate international human rights law, which means that there are little means to complaint about the right to education in Liberia.

Liberia has developed a number of key national policy documents on education. While the Education Law 2002 calls for free and compulsory primary education, the Education Reform Act 2011 establishes free compulsory primary education and free compulsory basic education for Liberian citizens. Liberia has also developed a number of policies to ensure gender equality and non-discrimination in education, which include measures to encourage girls to attend schools and strategies to ensure that the content of curricula is free of gender bias.

Liberia is still recovering from civil war, and is one of the poorest countries in the world. Nevertheless, even though the country has to face difficult constraints, the government states that 14% of its national budget is allocated to the education sector, which remains lower than that of comparable neighbouring countries. For instance, Sierra Leone and Cote D’Ivoire allocated respectively 18.1% (in 2009) and 24.6% (in 2008) of their total government expenditure to the education sector.

2. Advocacy opportunities
- Though acknowledging Liberia’s constraints, the budget allocated to education is still below international standards in comparable countries. As an immediate step, it could be asked from the government to prioritise education in its coming budgets and spend the maximum possible resources towards the realisation of the right to education.
- The Independent National Commission on Human Rights (INCHR), which had been mandated as part of the 2003 Accra Peace Agreement, is yet to be established, in part due to rejection of proposed commissioners by the Senate. It would be useful to pressure the Senate in order to advance the creation of the commission and ensure that the implementation human rights in Liberia are monitored by an independent national human rights institution.
- It could be strategic to promote the right to education in Liberia in the coming years as President Sirleaf is co-chairing the committee charged with creating a new set of development goals when the MDGs expire in 2015.
- Liberia is due to submit its 7th and 8th periodic reports to the CEDAW Committee in August 2013 and has never reported before the CESCR. Civil society could monitor the advancement of the CEDAW report and advocate for Liberia to report before the CESCR.
- Liberia has signed but has not yet ratified the African Charter’s protocol on establishing of an African Court. It should be advocated that Liberia ratifies this protocol, in order to open individual communication for violation of the right to education in Liberia before the African Court on Human and People’s Rights. The same could be done with the UN protocols opening individual complaints.

I. INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS

The major UN conventions (listed below) each have provisions relevant to education, non-discrimination or access to justice, and they can all be signed up to by states, thereby obliging these to respect, protect and fulfil human rights. When States ratify international treaties, they legally commit to respect its provisions, and the concrete situation in the country can therefore be measure against the standards set in the treaty. The ratification of treaties further indicates that the right to education does not come out of a vacuum, but corresponds to international standards that many States have committed to enforce.

It is sometimes possible to bring complaints before national courts if these treaties are not respected by States. Some conventions, either in their core text or in optional protocols, also specify routes of individual complaints to the different committees of independent experts.

II. NATIONAL POLICIES

National laws and policies are important because they define concretely the framework of rights and obligations for actors in the country. The Constitution is the highest legislative norm; it sets out general principles to which all other national laws and policies have to adhere. It is usually the text where human rights, including the right to education, are or should be defined. If a policy or law does not respect the Constitution, it can usually be challenged before courts.

Laws and policies that are related to the right to education form a complex net that is useful to review to identify 1) to which extent it is in line with international standards, and 2) whether it matches the reality of education in a country.

The list of laws and policies presented below is not exhaustive; it gives an indication of the relevant existing policies and their relation with the right to education. It can constitute a basis for further research, and it should be considered critically together with the observations made by NGOs and international organisations.

1. CONSTITUTION
More details about the relevant provisions of the constitutions can be found at http://www.right-to-education.org/country-node/363

1.1 Key Provisions

Article 11 of the Liberian Constitution states that “all persons are born equally free and independent and have certain natural, inherent and inalienable rights”. Chapter III protects these rights, which include:

- Article 11: Right to equality and non-discrimination
- Article 14: Freedom of thought, conscience and religion
- Article 15: Freedom of expression, freedom of speech and of the press, and academic freedom

Although not formulated in a rights language, the right to education is alluded to in Article 6 of the constitution as a commitment to “provide equal access to educational opportunities and facilities for all citizens” with an emphasis on “the elimination of illiteracy”. Children’s rights are not specifically identified in the document.

1.2 Interpretation of the Constitution — Role of International Law

The Constitution of Liberia does not direct implement international human rights treaties.

2.2 BUDGET

- The 2012/13 Draft National Budget of Liberia outlines current and projected government expenditure and donor funding relating to each sector, including education. This document reports that education was allocated 13% of the national budget in the 2009-2010 and 2010-2011 financial years, and 14% in 2011-2012.

- The Education Sector Plan of Liberia identifies that for the 2008-2012 period there is a 24% financing gap for all levels of education, and a 22% financing gap for basic education, which includes pre-primary, primary, junior high school and literacy.

- The United Nations Development Assistance Framework for Liberia 2008-2012 identifies that services, such as the provision of education, are at risk unless the government gains the capacity to fill the gap left by international organisations and partners as their humanitarian assistance is phased out in the coming years.

- According to Liberia’s Poverty Reduction Strategy (PRS) Paper progress report 2010, the resource requirements for the PRS were not met in its first year of implementation (2008).

2.3 POLICY FRAMEWORK OVERVIEW

- Education Reform Act 2011: This act establishes free compulsory primary education and free compulsory basic education. This act also aims to assist the government in decentralising the education sector, which is intended to improve the provision of education.

- Poverty Reduction Strategy (2008): Education is a key element in each pillar of the PRS strategy. Development of the sector is considered to be important for consolidating peace and security, for revitalising the economy for strengthening governance and the rule of law, and in the rehabilitation of infrastructure and delivery of basic services.

- Education Sector Plan (ESP) (2010): Fully aligned with PRS, this plan outlines future strategies and policies for reconstruction and development of education in Liberia.
Right to Education Project – July 2012

- Liberia Primary Education Recovery Programme (LPERP) (2007): Informs the PRS to create an environment for accessible, quality education at the primary level. It consists of a three-year Action Program aimed at restoring primary education after years of functioning on an ad-hoc emergency basis following the end of the civil war in 2003.

- The Children's Bill 2009: Brings the CRC and other child-related international legal instruments to which Liberia is a State Party into domestic law. Among other actions, the bill plans that the government will establish a child rights education fund and a child rights education committee.

- National Policy on Girls’ Education (2006): Drafted by the Ministry of Education (MoE) with UNICEF and other partners, this policy promotes the education of girls through several measures, including:
  - Meeting Millennium Development Goal 2 by providing free and compulsory primary school and reducing secondary school fees by 50%
  - Recruiting and training more female teachers
  - Establishing girls clubs at schools
  - Providing counselling in schools for girls
  - Ending the impunity of teachers who commit sexual abuse and assault of students
  - Increasing the availability of small scale scholarships for girls

- Education Law 2002: Establishes free and compulsory primary education.

Gender Equality in Education

Strategies involve making the content, process and context of primary education free of gender bias. This also includes encouraging and supporting equality and respect, ensuring that curricula and textbooks promote gender equality, and supervising the equal impact of rules and disciplinary actions on boys and girls.

Awareness-raising

Conduct awareness campaigns to encourage parents to send their daughters to school.

Accessibility

School Construction, Repair, and Updating

The government has begun large-scale rehabilitation and reconstruction of education institution and Rural Teacher Training Institutes (RTTIs), including provision of furniture and equipment, to improve access and quality of education for as many students as possible.

Primary Education Assessment

The MoE will institute a program of assessing learning achievement at all levels of the system and will use these results as feedback for planning and teacher training in a regular cycle of quality improvement.

Secondary Education Assessment

The MoE will continue to monitor learning achievement at secondary level using the exam results at grade 9 and 12 as the basic data for its measures of quality. The aim is to improve learning achievement at the junior and senior secondary levels of education.

Curriculum improvement

Plan to review and improve curricula to include, for example, human rights education, peace education, sex education, life skills and vocational training, and to provide the relevant textbooks and learning materials.

III. RELEVANT RECOMMENDATIONS FROM NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL ORGANISATIONS AND BODIES

The recommendations and observations made by national or international bodies provide a critical view of the laws and policies in a country, and can constitute a useful tool to identify the gaps related to the right to education. They also give arguments for national advocacy, and can be useful forum to mobilise people and drive change on the right to education.

Recommendations are often made by NGOs in the context of the reporting to UN bodies. They give the point of view of civil society and affected people. At the national level, independent monitoring bodies, such as national human rights institutions, can also make recommendations on human rights, normally giving a neutral domestic perspective on the state of human rights in a country.

The performance of States to respect their obligations is also reviewed by other States through Universal Periodic Review (UPR), which is a peer review mechanism taking place at the Human Rights Council. The recommendations made in this context, are often rather general, but carry a significant political weight. The analysis made by UN human rights bodies related to treaties which States have signed up to provide more specific recommendations, and constitute one of the most authoritative sources of critical analysis on human rights in a country.

Other international mechanisms, such as UN Special Rapporteurs and UN Agencies (including UNICEF, the World Bank, etc.) can be another useful source of information.

1. NGOs AND NATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

Information can be found on the website of the national human rights institution, from the NGOs themselves directly, or from the summary of stakeholders' information compiled by the UN for the UPR.

In their submission for the 2010 UPR, NGOs working in Liberia reported on the right to education, identifying that school buildings and facilities were lacking or difficult to access. Yet, budgetary allocation for education was calculated to be only 9% of the national budget. Concerns were also raised regarding the lack of attention to human rights education.

2. UN HUMAN RIGHTS BODIES

The relevant comments made by UN agencies on the human rights situation in Liberia can be found in the compilation of UN information prepared for the UPR, and the OHCHR offers the possibility here to perform an advanced search amongst all the UN human rights recommendations made on Liberia.

2004 REVIEW

Selected recommendations from the 2004 review:

- Budget: Prioritise budgetary allocations to ensure implementation of economic, social and cultural rights of children, particularly those from economically disadvantaged backgrounds
- Non-discrimination: increase efforts to ensure that existing laws guarantee the principle of non-discrimination, and adopt a strategy to eliminate discrimination
- Education:
  - Prioritise construction and reconstruction of schools throughout the country
  - Improve accessibility for all children, including children with disabilities
  - Take necessary measures to remedy the low quality of education and to provide appropriate training for teachers
Progressively ensure that girls and boys from urban and rural areas have equal access to educational opportunities and receive free education without any hidden costs

Design accelerated learning and vocational training programmes for young people and children who have missed educational opportunities

Improve the educational system with a view to achieving the aims mentioned in article 29, paragraph 1, of the Convention and introduce human rights, including children’s rights, into the school curricula

2012 FORTHCOMING REVIEW

In its 2nd, 3rd and 4th periodic combined report, which will be reviewed by the Committee in September or October 2012, Liberia details how it considers to have observed the recommendations made by the CRC in the 2004 review.

Defence for Children International reported the following observations for the purpose of the September/October 2012 review of Liberia:

- Accessibility: Children who migrate for education, especially for senior and junior high school, face problems with meeting basic needs and are more vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation.
- Child Labour: While primary education is free in Liberia, widespread poverty means that children do not access education because they must engage in child labour in order to meet their and their families’ needs.

COMMITTEE ON ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS (CESCR)

Next review Liberia has not been scheduled for review yet. Liberia has not yet submitted its 1st periodic report to the Committee, which was due on 30 June 2006.

COMMITTEE ON THE ELIMINATION OF DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN (CEDAW COMMITTEE)

Past and future session of the CEDAW Committee can be found at http://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/cedaw/sessions.htm.

Last review 31 July 2009, CEDAW/C/LBR/CO/6

Next review - Next report due on 16 August 2013

The CEDAW Committee acknowledged the efforts made by State to revise existing legislation that discriminates against women, and to enact new laws. While recognising this progress, the Committee expressed concern for the structural and other barriers to quality education which constitute particular obstacles to the education of girls and young women. These barriers include the lack of physical... infrastructure, the persistence of gender-based stereotypes in text-books and school curricula that reinforce discriminatory attitudes against women in society, and the lack of trained and qualified teachers. The Committee also expressed concern about the persistence of sexual abuse and harassment of girls in schools and the negative impact of harmful traditional practices, such as early and forced marriage, on girls’ education.

- The Committee urged Liberia to implement measures, including temporary special measures, to ensure equal access for girls and women to all levels of education and retention of girls in school, and to ensure that sexual abuse and harassment in schools is stopped. It also encouraged Liberia to take steps to reforming its curricula to address structural causes of discrimination against women, and to adopt programmes, including adult education, to improve literacy among women and girls.

2.3 Other relevant UN bodies

The analysis of the human rights situation in Liberia made by UN agencies, including the right to education, can be found in the Compilation of UN information prepared for the UPR. The OHCHR office in Liberia gathers information regarding human rights in the country and the UN field office gathers additional UN documents. Information about country and other visits by Special Procedures Mandate Holders since 1998 can be found here.

- The United Nations Country Team (UNCT) indicated that the low net primary enrolment rate in Liberia is often attributed to unofficial fees and costs relating to uniforms and supplies, such as books. In addition, there is still an insufficient number of schools, especially in rural communities.
- The 2008-2012 United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) stated that Liberia’s general rate of illiteracy is estimated at over 50 per cent and that gender disparities as well as urban/rural differences in access to education are a serious problem.
